

BAKI

Surplus food, matched before it spoils.

Every day, perfectly usable food can become waste simply because there's no fast way to connect it with someone who needs it. Baki was created to address that gap.

AUTOMATED SURPLUS FOOD MATCHING

Surplus food, matched before it spoils.

Local grocery vendors in Nairobi end up with perishable surplus that's still good but can't wait until tomorrow. We connect it, in minutes, to the local pantry, NGO, or neighbor who can use it tonight.

SURPLUS

Retailers have food they can no longer sell.

DISCONNECTION

Potential recipients may not know the food is available.

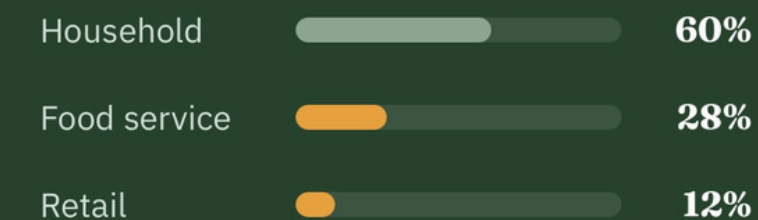

TIME

Perishable food has a limited window for redistribution.

GOOD FOOD IS BEING WASTED WHILE PEOPLE STILL NEED FOOD.

The problem we identified isn't simply food waste. It's a coordination problem. Vendors may have surplus food, while NGOs, food banks and communities nearby may need it, but there isn't always an efficient way to connect the two before that food spoils.

WHERE GLOBAL FOOD WASTE HAPPENS

The marigold slices, 40% combined, are where Baki operates. It's also the least measured part of the chain in our markets.

WHY THIS MATTERS

306M

Africans were undernourished in 2024

1.05B tonnes

of food was wasted globally in 2022

892.7M

Africans faced moderate or severe food insecurity

OUR SOLUTION SUPPORTS

 SDG 2

ZERO HUNGER:

Improve access to food and contribute to ending hunger and food insecurity.

 SDG 12.3

RESPONSIBLE CONSUMPTION & PRODUCTION:

Help reduce food waste at the retail and consumer levels.

 SDG 13

CLIMATE ACTION

Reducing food waste also reduces the environmental impact associated with wasted food.

OUR KEY INSIGHT

THE PROBLEM ISN'T ALWAYS A LACK OF FOOD.
IT'S A LACK OF CONNECTION.

HOW BAKI WORKS

Baki connects food vendors with nearby NGOs, pantries, and community members through a simple, time-sensitive redistribution process. Vendors list their surplus, Baki helps identify a suitable recipient, and the food is then collected and redistributed before it spoils.
